Your Editor's Notes on the 1956 Convention

Plans have almost been completed for the Sixteenth Annual Convention of the Federation of Insurance Counsel which will be held at the beautiful Shamrock Hotel in Houston, Texas, August 22-24, 1956. An outstanding program has been arranged, a summary of which appears at the conclusion of this note. No further comments are needed about the program—res ipsa loquitur.

You're afraid it will be too hot? Have you been to Texas recently? As you get off that air-conditioned plane or train and step into an air-conditioned terminal, ride an air-conditioned limousine or cab to that completely air-conditioned summer citadel, The Shamrock, and sit in your air-conditioned room overlooking a spacious pool—the heat is the last thing that will enter your mind!

On February 11, 1956, nineteen of the Officers and key Committee members traveled from all parts of the country, met with Bob Luce at Houston and, entirely at their own expense, spent two full days perfecting the 1956 Convention plans.

All of us were impressed with the accommodations and the excellent food, and if you would like to try some new taste thrills, ask John or Pearl Williams where to go in Houston to find "Oyster Bisque" or "Shrimp Ernie."

John Williams, our Executive Vice-President, with his usual efficiency and enthusiasm set about finding out what the Texas members and their wives thought should be done to show the rest of the country (they did admit there was a small rim around Texas — on the north side) what Southern Hospitality really is—Texas style. What plans they have made! More about this later.

If you would like to spend a few days on the Gulf at Galveston before the Convention (or afterwards if it does not conflict with your plans to attend the American Bar Association meeting in Dallas, August 27-31), you can make reservations for delightful accommodations in Galveston through our Galveston member, V. W. McLeod, 801 Union Station Building, Galveston, Texas. This fact was noted in a recent mailing you received, but you may not have noticed that they must be made by July 1. Galveston has much to offer the deep-sea fisherman, the gourmet, the lovers of the old-and-rare, and for those who might like to "shoot-'em-up" with a bit of night life. You may have noticed in the same mailing that you can make plans to tour Mexico and visit Monterey, Mexico City and Acapulco.

One more thing should be said. We have for many years taken pride in the fact that our Conventions were organized as Family Conventions. This convention will be no exception and it promises to be the best yet for your family. Your wife and children will be having the time of their lives while you're in session. The Texas wives, sparked by Pearl Williams, have made sure of this and have formulated some terrific plans for them! So, as was said in the brochure, "bring your formals, your bathing suit, your blue jeans and your slacks, throw in your golf clubs, your dancing shoes, your lariat and your water wings."

Now, to the Convention program. One highlight will be the banquet address given by Mr. Carrol M. Shanks, President of the Prudential Insurance Company of America. I think that you will agree when you read the following outline that this promises to be one of the most informative and inspiring meetings we have had.

Combating the Use of Demonstrative Evidence

By WELCOME D. PIERSON*

THE MOST DRAMATIC EXAMPLE of the use of Demonstrative Evidence coming to my attention occurred at a court martial trial during World War II. Paul C. Duncan of Oklahoma City and a member of the American Bar Association, then a Captain in the United States Army, was asked to defend an Infantry Captain charged with "Disobedience of a lawful order during time of war." Specifically, the Captain had refused to send men under his command armed with shovels and buckets of sand into a burning Japanese supply area located on a landing beach for the purpose of attempting to extinguish fires. Fire hoses from landing ships and bulldozer operations had already failed. The Captain offered to enter the area personally, but pointed out that the dump was full of live ammunition, some of which had already exploded. In defending the Captain as Defense Counsel, Captain Duncan introduced in evidence a live 500-pound Japanese bomb which he had pulled from the dump. When the bomb was wheeled into court, there was a quick recess and a subsequent acquittal of the Infantry Captain. Within two weeks, this same Infantry Captain was decorated for bravery at Biak and promoted to Major.

The soundest available method for combating the use of Demonstrative Evidence is the development and use of better and more convincing Demonstrative Evidence. There is nothing new about so-called Demonstrative Evidence.

Demonstrative Evidence was employed in the trial of cases in the tribal courts of the Cherokee Nation in the Indian Territory, now a part of Oklahoma, as early as 1840. In homicide cases, if the evidence developed that one Indian during the conflict made a guttural noise resembling the gobble of a wild turkey, it was positive proof of his intention to kill his adversary. In the trial of murder cases, a Cherokee Indian was permitted to utter the Cherokee gobble for the purpose of demonstrating the intent on the part of his assailant to kill.

Almost seventy-five years ago the federal court permitted the introduction of photographs in evidence.[1] The use of demonstrative evidence was slow to appear in the trial of personal injury actions. There was considerable development during the period from 1900 to 1912. Then for some reason it was disregarded. With enthusiasm, and I might say imagination, it has developed to a fantastic degree in recent years. It is not unusual in the trial of negligence actions for the defense attorney to be confronted in the courtroom with colored photographs, skeletons and intricate models.

This being a trial tactics panel, I will not attempt to discuss the rules of evidence governing the admission in evidence of the various types of Demonstrative Evidence. There is a growing tendency on the part of courts to exclude from evidence gruesome photographs where the obvious purpose in seeking their introduction is to inflame the jury rather than enlighten it.[2]

An attorney may well study photographs carefully at the time they are first submitted to him for preliminary examination before being offered in evidence. He may decide to make no objections.

In the trial of a recent highway accident case, the plaintiff was particularly anxious to offer in evidence a series of snapshot pictures of the damaged vehicles taken by an amateur photographer before they were removed from the scene of the accident. To his astonishment, the defense attorney offered no objections. The plaintiff was seeking damages for personal injuries in the amount of $100,000, contending that he sustained a broken back in the accident. During a recess, the defense attorney arranged with a commercial photographer to make a large "blown-up" reproduction of one of the pictures. The enlarged photograph clearly portrayed the plaintiff bending his back in a stooped position attempting to lift one of the cars so they could be disengaged from each other. It did not take the jury very long to determine that a man with a broken back would not be physically able to bend his back a few minutes after the accident occurred and assist in lifting one of the vehicles.

Several years ago, I was defending a grading contractor in an action involving the derailment of a freight train. In the grading operations, it was necessary for the dump trucks of the defendant to make many trips across the railroad crossing. The work ceased at five o'clock in the afternoon. About midnight a freight train was derailed at the crossing. Considerable damage was done to the railroad equipment and the fireman lost both legs in the accident. An ambitious railroad claim agent made photographs of the crossing. One of the photographs portrayed what appeared to be large deposits of dirt on the crossing. The attorney for the plaintiff offered the picture in evidence. He became a little worried when the defense attorney not only offered no objections but agreed that the picture might be introduced in evidence. Nothing further was said about the picture until the closing argument. The defense attorney pointed out to the jury that in the background of the picture the claim agent's automobile could be seen. The car appeared to be up in the air about ten or twelve feet above the crossing. It was apparent that the claim agent had placed his camera down on the ground to create the optical illusion of dirt being on the crossing. The jury so believed and returned a verdict in favor of the grading contractor. "Oh, what tangled webs we weave when first we practice to deceive."

Colored photographs portraying open wounds or burns pose a serious problem for the defense. The attorney may always assume that his opponent will cause the pictures to be taken at a time when the appearance of the injured parts is the most horrible. In the federal courts and jurisdictions where discovery procedure is authorized, the defense attorney may secure an examination of the photographs in advance of trial. He can then secure a court order requiring the injured party to submit to the taking of new photographs after the wounds have healed. Healed scars do not look as bad as open wounds. Most hospitals are equipped to take photographs of wounds. If the attorney believes he may be confronted with a serious claim at a later date, it is good strategy to arrange with the hospital to make photographs of the wounds after they have healed and before the patient leaves the hospital.

In the trial of an action arising out of the death of a man by electrocution, the attorney representing the widow attempted to introduce in evidence a photograph of the deceased reclining in his casket, on the theory that the photograph disclosed an electrical burn on the wrist of the deceased. The defense attorney insisted that the portion of the picture showing the burn on the wrist of the deceased be reproduced blocking out the casket and the remaining portion of the body of the deceased. The court sustained the position of the defendant and required the plaintiff's attorney to prepare the exhibit so as to show to the jury only the wrist and the burn.

Colored photographs may be used most effectively for purposes other than portraying the horror of open wounds and burns. In an oil field accident case the accident was caused by the breaking of an iron flange attached to a heavy piece of machinery. The defense of the oil company was that the flange had been improperly welded by an independent welding contractor. After the welding operation, the machinery had been painted a bright red. A careful microscopic examination of the broken parts disclosed red paint pigments in the center of the weld unquestionably caused by the red paint seeping into the defective weld. The difficulty presented was that the machinery was too cumbersome and bulky to be brought to the court room. Colored photographs were made of the damaged parts. The colored pictures clearly portrayed the red pigments of paint imbedded in the weld. The compensation insurance carrier of the oil company was required to pay the injured but recouped its entire loss in a subrogation action against the welding company.

In many cases, it is good trial strategy to counteract or disprove the probative value of flat photographs by the use of aerial photographs. In a recent case coming under my observation, the owner of a truck was charged with having cut the truck to the left side of the highway in rounding a curve. Shortly before entering the curve the truck had passed across a bridge. The plaintiff produced at the pre-trial conference a flat photograph of the highway and bridge. I am compelled to admit that a fair inference could be drawn from an examination of the flat photograph that the truck driver swung to the left of the pavement on what appeared to be an abrupt curve. An aerial photograph was made of the section of the highway including the curve and the bridge. The aerial photograph disclosed the curve to be long and sweeping, portraying a situation refuting the assumption that the truck driver had cut to the left.

In some cases third dimensional pictures may be used to an advantage. The most difficult problem is the exhibition of the pictures to the jury. Those of you familiar with the technique of third dimensional pictures know there are only two methods of exhibiting the pictures to the viewer. After the pictures have been made by use of a double lens camera, to exhibit the pictures the viewer must look at the film through a small view box. An alternative method is to project the picture onto a movie screen in which event it is necessary for the audience to wear specially made glasses. For courtroom exhibitions, I believe the use of viewers is best. After the small film has been identified and offered in evidence, it may be inserted in the viewer, handed first to opposing counsel, then to the judge and then to each individual juror in the same manner a flat photograph would be used in the trial of a case. If the attorney deems advisable, he may have a sufficient number of prints made of the film and a sufficient number of view boxes to enable the court, opposing counsel and all members of the jury to view the picture at the same time. The cost is not prohibitive. Extra prints of the picture cost fifty cents. The prices of view boxes vary, but an inexpensive view box entirely adequate for the demonstration can be secured at a cost of approximately two dollars. If fifteen view boxes and an equal number of prints are used, the entire expenditure for equipment is less than fifty dollars.

Third dimensional pictures were used most effectively in the trial of a so-called stumbling case coming under my observation. The plaintiff contended he stumbled over a slightly raised place on the floor of a warehouse. The actual facts were that the injured party awkwardly fell from a raised portion of the warehouse to the lower portion of the floor, a distance of about three or four feet. The opposing attorney produced a flat photograph of the premises which portrayed the warehouse floor as being flat. There was no way the raised portion of the warehouse floor could be effectively exhibited to the jury except by use of third dimensional pictures. The case was being tried at such a distance from the scene of the accident as to make the viewing of the premises impractical. The third dimensional pictures were introduced in evidence and viewed by the members of the jury. Each juror was asked to first look at the picture through the view box with both eyes and then look at the picture with one eye closed. The view with one eye closed had the effect of transforming the third dimensional picture into a flat picture, similar to the flat photograph which had been offered in evidence by the plaintiff. The comparison had a tremendous effect on the jury and the results were satisfactory. In using the view boxes, the jurors must be cautioned to adjust the box to conform to their own eyesight. There is a small adjustment device on the bottom of the view box.

I am of the fixed opinion that simple experiments made in the courtroom in the presence of the jury are far more effective than the use of elaborate models. For example, in the trial of a case a few years ago, it was the contention of the plaintiff that the braking assembly on a motor vehicle had been put together improperly. He contended that the brake shoes had been placed in the braking drum backward, causing the braking mechanism to operate improperly. During the trial of the case, a mechanic garbed in clean and faded coveralls took the braking mechanism apart and reassembled it in the presence of the jury. He demonstrated to the jury that it was impossible to insert the brake shoes in the mechanism backwards. An honest farmer was sitting in the front row of the jury box. He leaned over and watched the experiment with intense interest. Finally his interest exploded. He exclaimed, "Well, the damn thing is fool-proof, isn't it?" This simple experiment, made by a mechanic understanding braking mechanism, brought about the desired results.

In another case in which I recently appeared as counsel, the General Electric Company was charged with faulty assembly of the wiring of a "Hotpoint" electric range, causing a short circuit and a damaging fire. A "Hotpoint" electric range was moved into the court room. An expert, familiar with the wiring element, explained the construction of the wiring to the jury. The jury paid close attention to his testimony and were in a better position to understand the manner in which the range was constructed. Lawyers are always interested in the outcome of cases. The case was settled for $750 after the attorney for the plaintiff became alarmed over the testimony of the experienced wiring technician.

I assume that all attorneys who try cases involving transportation companies are familiar with a fusee. A fusee is a flare which can be ignited by tearing the tape from the top. It can be lighted in a matter of seconds. I have had jurors doubt this fact when related by a truck driver. The best way to dramatically convince the juror that a fusee can be ignited in a few seconds is to bring one to the courtroom and have the truck driver ignite it. Permission for presenting the demonstration should of course be secured from the trial judge. As a precaution against fire it is always advisable to have a bucket of sand handy to be used in extinguishing the lighted fusee. Unless extinguished, the standard fusee will burn for fifteen minutes.

Another example of the use of trial experiments occurred during the trial of a case involving the destruction of a house by fire. The plaintiff contended that the fire was caused by the failure of the thermostat on a hot water tank to operate properly, causing the tank to over-heat. An alert fire inspector secured possession of the thermostat immediately after the fire. At the trial the thermostat was offered in evidence. An expert testified it was in good order and worked properly. He explained that when the water tank cooled, there would be a click in the thermostat as the mechanism opened the valve on the gas supply, causing the burner under the tank to be ignited from the pilot. He further explained that after the tank had reached a certain temperature there would be another click in the thermostat and the mechanism would cut off the gas pressure. He demonstrated these facts by using the thermostat removed from the burned house. He held the thermostat before the jury and lighted a flame under it. In a few seconds a click was heard. He removed the flame and a second click was heard. He repeated the demonstration by using a new thermostat secured from the stock of the appliance store with the same results, positively establishing that the thermostat on the stove was working properly at the time of the fire.

In an action against a bottling company for implied warranty in selling the plaintiff a bottle of Coca-Cola containing a mouse, the defendant offered evidence that for the mouse to have entered the bottle, it would necessarily have been immersed in a two and one-half per cent solution of caustic soda at a temperature of 120 degrees for eleven minutes while the bottle was being washed, disinfected and cleaned. It then offered to demonstrate in the court room the effect such a bath would have on a good live mouse. The court refused to permit the experiment to be performed for the reason it was not established "that the mouse in question was of the same age and constitutional make-up of the one to be used in the experiment." [3] As a precautionary measure it is suggested that bottling companies be more careful in the future and keep a careful record of the birth, sex, weight, health and general characteristics of all mice inhabiting the premises.

his majesty's loyal opposition known as NACCA. Their organization is dedicated to "help injured workers." Several years ago, I was invited to attend one of their conventions and I told my friend of the opposition I saw no reason why I should not attend, for the reason that under the greatest duress I had probably contributed as much to "helping injured workers" as any lawyer in their organization.

As trial attorneys, our most important task is not to quarrel with the use of so-called demonstrative evidence, but to study methods of explaining it, or combating its proper use.

The only admonition I can give is not to be too tense. One trial attorney reports an incident of referring to the plaintiff's skeleton as "Oscar." Before the trial was over, "Oscar" had been referred to so many times that the jury was doing more laughing than giving serious attention to the gruesome exhibit.

Another method which may be employed when your opponent unveils the skeleton, is to ask if it is the skeleton of his grandfather or one of his uncles. He will not like it very well, but there isn't anything he can do about it.

Another incident, which is not recommended, occurred in the trial of a lawsuit. When the plaintiff's attorney unveiled the skeleton, to his utter astonishment, there was a cigarette protruding from the mouth of "Oscar." Just exactly how the cigarette happened to be in the skeleton's mouth is unknown.

Another use of demonstrative evidence which has come to be prevalent is what is known as trial by blackboard. Generally, the opposing attorney will have three blackboards. On the first, he will write a summary of his opening statement. On the second, he will jot down the important portions of the testimony of his witnesses. It is the use of the third blackboard with which he will really "go to town." On the third blackboard, he writes astronomical figures, a predicate for which has been made by the testimony of an actuary. With the earning capacity of the party involved, established by evidence, the plaintiff's attorney will then write on the blackboard the amount of cash deposit required to assure a monthly income to the injured man, or in death cases the beneficiaries, of a certain amount per month. These figures will sometimes indicate that the plaintiff should receive $100,000, $200,000 or $300,000. After the figures are written, the blackboard remains on display in front of the jury where they can observe the amounts throughout the balance of the trial. During the argument the attorney for the plaintiff refers to the figures and tells the jury he simply wants them to be an adding machine and add up the amount to which the plaintiff is entitled. One effective answer to this type of argument is for the defense attorney, in his answering argument, to say that he does not want the jury to be an adding machine or mechanical device, but he wants them to be human beings and use their reasoning faculties.

The most effective way I know to counteract the use of blackboards is for the defense attorney to wait patiently until the attorney for the plaintiff has completed his opening argument, and then use a little intestinal fortitude. He may simply walk up to the blackboard which displays large sums of money, calmly pick up an eraser and erase the figures. He can write on the blackboard a large "0" and tell the jury that this is the amount which the plaintiff is entitled to recover. Turning to the other blackboards, he can again apply the eraser and write down the important portions of the testimony of the defense witness, and tell the jury the reasons the plaintiff should recover nothing, because of the evidence he has written on the blackboards.

Trial tactics of this type generally create a mild commotion in the court room. The attorney representing the plaintiff will squeal like a stuck hog, but there is nothing he can do about it. He wrote his version of the trial on the blackboards and the defense attorney is entitled to write his version. Quite frequently the attorney for the plaintiff, in his final argument, will try to reconstruct the figures, or rewrite the points of evidence on the blackboard. If he attempts to do so, he is consuming valuable time. In any event, he has been thrown off his stride and his smooth-running machine has become snarled.

Good damage-suit attorneys are very adroit and shrewd. After a few incidents of the type I have just described, they pivot and change their method of presenting the same dramatic show in the court room. In the trial of recent cases, I have observed counsel for the plaintiff to cause the actuarial figures to be painted on a large cardboard and placed on an easel in front of the jury. I expect before the tides of time have removed me from the arena, to walk into the court room some day and find that one of these damage-suit lawyers has painted the figures on the cardboard with the use of luminous paint.

Another countermove which attorneys for the plaintiff are now using is to bring their own blackboards to the court house. If the attorney brings his own blackboards and writes the figures in his speech to the jury on the blackboards, there is another approach. Courteously and calmly, and in the presence of the jury, the defense attorney can ask his opponent if he may borrow his blackboards for the purpose of making a demonstration. The attorney for the plaintiff is placed in a bad dilemma. If he refuses, the jury may secure the impression he is unfair. If he agrees, he loses one act of his show.

As an alternative method, defense counsel may bring his own blackboards to the court house. He can write his own figures and comments on the blackboards, take the blackboards of the plaintiff down from the easels and place his own on display in front of the jury, or better still, place them on top of plaintiff's blackboards. Of course, counsel for the plaintiff will remove your blackboards and you will remove his, and the trial will become a game of shifting charts and blackboards, all of which generally inures to the advantage of the defendant.

I am fully convinced that the basic cause of some of the exorbitant verdicts which have been returned in some localities in recent years has been the result of inadequate cross-examination of the actuary who has testified with reference to mortality and actuarial tables. In many instances, attorneys have agreed on the life expectancy of the individual involved. It is my thinking that juries many times follow the actuarial figures literally when they would not have done so if the fundamental basis underlying the compilation of actuarial tables had been explained to them. For example, let us assume that an actuary by the name of Dr. Josiah Sockwell has testified that according to the American Experience Table of Mortality, the individual involved, who is 36 years of age, has a life expectancy of 31.7 years, and according to the Commissioners 1941 Standard Ordinary Table of Life Expectancy, has a life expectancy of 32.59 years. Dr. Sockwell has further testified concerning the total amount of annuities for furnishing a fixed monthly income. It seems wise to cross-examine Dr. Sockwell along the following lines:

Q. Dr. Sockwell, am I correct in stating that the American Table is based on the lives of 100,000 persons?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Am I further correct in stating that the C. O. S. Table is based on the lives of 1,000,000 persons?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How are those particular lives selected?

A. They are secured from the mortality experience of life insurance companies.

Q. Do I understand that these lives are from a select group of people?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do I understand that this group involves bankers, school teachers, farmers, workmen, lawyers and people from all walks of life?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do I understand that these particular people are each in good health, and are the type of individuals whom life insurance companies would insure at standard rates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know anything about the health of the individual whose life expectancy is involved in the case on trial?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not he was in good health?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you have a table which will tell how long a worker in a sawmill would live?

A. No, sir. There is no such table.

Q. Then you are not trying to tell this jury that this man will live as long as your table indicates?

A. No, sir. The Lord only knows how long he would live.

Time will not permit me to amplify a cross-examination of this character. The proper questions will suggest themselves to each attorney. A cross-examination of this type has proved effective in minimizing the effect of testimony relating to life expectancy and actuarial tables. In the final analysis, I hold with a federal judge who in 1892 expressed a contempt for the use of the tables by saying, "I have no confidence in, and less respect for, these tables." [4]

Their use in tort actions has been sanctioned for more than one hundred years, but they can be explained. In the field of pecuniary loss, use may be made of economic principles. This field is too intricate and broad to be fully discussed within the time available. For example, in the trial of the average case, the earning capacity of the individual involved is established. The attorney for the plaintiff attempts to leave the impression with the jury that the individual would earn the amount he was earning at the time of the accident during the balance of his life expectancy. My suggestion is that the attorney discuss the particular employment of the individual involved with a skilled economist or statistician. To do this, it may be necessary to employ an individual skilled in this field of science who occupies a position on the faculty of the University.

When the field is explored, the lawyer quite frequently will be astonished to find that evidence may be marshalled to the effect that the particular work of the individual involved is seasonal, and that the injured man could not expect employment for more than one-third of the time during any calendar year. Similar evidence may be developed for the purpose of establishing that due to the particular work of the individual, his earning capacity would decline at an earlier age than shown by his life expectancy. For instance, a man employed in some occupations finds it almost impossible to secure employment after reaching the age of forty-five. Evidence of this type, when carefully assembled, is competent. The economist from the University may be qualified as an expert on the witness stand and he can furnish the jury with real, honest evidence concerning the probable earning capacity of the injured man, and not leave the question open for the jurors to guess.

Of course, each case involves its own factual situation. If the defense, as to liability, is well grounded, it may be best to pitch the defense solely on the question of liability and disregard evidence as to the extent of disability or the loss of earning capacity. Each case involves it own factual situation and astute attorneys can be depended upon to properly map the plan of trial strategy.

In the selection of experts it is wise not to overlook the use of local people. The County Engineer in the county where the case is being tried is worth more in explaining diagrams than a graduate engineer called from a large city. If the case involves science, the instructor who teaches science in the high school is worth more than a professor called in from the University. Even in the field of economics, if the teacher of business in a local high school can qualify as an economist, his testimony will be given greater weight than a man with a Ph.D. who has written many books on the subject. Don't overlook the use of local doctors. I recall distinctly the appearance on the witness stand of an old doctor whose hair had been kissed with the snows of three-quarters of a century. He took the witness stand with a battered copy of Gray's Anatomy under his arm. He had delivered babies in the community for almost fifty years. Some of the members of the jury panel were his patients. His testimony, even about the intricacies of orthopedic surgery, was given greater weight than the testimony of the experienced orthopedic surgeon called in from a metropolitan city. Bear in mind that the testimony which will convince the jury to decide the case in your favor is the best, regardless of the source from which it is acquired.

Naturally, lawyers can always have more hindsight than foresight. Trying as hard as we can, we will make some mistakes. I am reminded of the story told of the young sailor during World War II. He had been away from home for several months before his parents received a letter. The young sailor said in the letter that he could not tell his folks where he was located, but that he had shot a Polar bear. His parents readily deduced that he was in the Arctic regions. A few months later they received a second letter. Again the young sailor stated that he could not tell his parents his location, but that he had danced with a Hula girl. His parents logically deducted that he was in the Hawaiian Islands. The next letter came more promptly. In about two weeks his parents received a letter. The young sailor said, "Now, don't get excited. I can tell you where I am. I am in the hospital. I cannot tell you what is wrong, but some of the doctors tell me I would be in better shape if I had danced with the Polar bear and shot the Hula girl."

It is easier to have hindsight than foresight. We all sometimes do the wrong thing. The remarks I have made are only suggestions from my own experience, and I hope you may find them of some assistance.

Obligation of Insurer to Defend After Exhaustion of Policy Limits

By NORMAN E. RISJORD
JUNE M. AUSTIN *

THE 1955 REVISIONS in the automobile and general liability standard policy provisions include a revision in the wording introductory to the Defense, Settlement, Supplementary Payments Insuring Agreement. Where this wording formerly read "As respects the insurance afforded", it now reads "With respect to such insurance as is afforded". This change in just a few seemingly innocuous words is a highly significant development. It was not meant to change the insurance protection which the insurers thought they were affording but it was an effort to prevent an abuse some courts were making of one of the basic concepts of the policy. Strangely, many insurance lawyers have felt that there was no abuse. Others have thought that there was and that the development was fraught with much danger to insureds as well as expense to insurers and consequent increase in premiums. The change in wording represents the underwriting concepts which coincide with the views of the second group.

GENERALLY

The question is whether an insurer is obligated (and exclusively privileged) to defend the insured against a suit which alleges facts such that, if they are substantiated so that there is finally a judgment against the insured based on such facts, the insurer will not be obligated to pay the judgment nor any part of it. Perhaps there will be ready agreement that a policy covering liability arising out of the use of an automobile should not provide the insured with defense for a suit alleging liability arising out of the operation of an airplane, elevator, steamboat, or railroad train, from which it follows that the insurer is not and should not be obligated to defend suits alleging facts not covered by the policy. There are many cases, both under the basic automobile policy [1] and under other liability policies,[2] holding that the insurer is not obligated to defend such suits.

There are a few cases holding [3] or saying [4] or implying[5] that the obligation to defend is separate and exists regardless of coverage. Cases pertaining to the duty to defend where the allegations in the suit against the insured are within the coverage but the actual facts are not are beyond the scope of this article.

Exhaustion of Policy Limits

The division of authority on the general question (while not to be ignored) so preponderates against the obligation to defend that the insurers might have dismissed it but for what seems to have been a fairly strong recent tendency in the other direction in a related phase of the problem not involved in the facts of the cases previously cited.

That phase involves the situation where the insurer has exhausted its policy limits by payment of claims or judgments and is then faced with a demand for defense of a suit in the outcome of which it will have no pecuniary interest. Here the division of authority is more pronounced and the views of even insurance lawyers less unanimous.

The classic automobile liability case on this subject is Lumbermen's Mut. Casualty Co. v. McCarthy. There was a per person bodily injury limit of $5,000. The insured's automobile injured a minor. The minor recovered a judgment against the insured for an amount in excess of $5,000. His father recovered a judgment against the insured for consequential damages. On appeal, the son's judgment was affirmed while in respect of the father a new trial was ordered.[6] The insurer thereupon paid $5,000 on account of the son's judgment and then refused to defend the insured in the new trial of the father's action. In declaratory judgment proceedings to determine whether the insurer was obligated to defend the second trial, the Supreme Court of New Hampshire held that the insurer was not so obligated.[7]

A contrary result was reached in American Casualty Co. of Reading, Pa. v. Howard,[8] where the bodily injury limits were $5,000/10,000 and the property damage liability limit was $5,000. The insured's automobile collided with a motorcycle. The driver of the motorcycle was fatally injured. He died the next day. The administrator recovered a judgment for $7,000 against the insured for the death. The administrator then brought action against the insured for $25,000 for pain and suffering of the deceased and for property damage. The insurer paid the administrator $5,000 and the insured paid $2,000, to satisfy the death judgment. In reversing the District Court in declaratory judgment proceedings, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit held that the insurer was obligated to defend the second action notwithstanding prior exhaustion of the bodily injury liability limit. This was on the ground that the second action involved an unallocated claim for bodily injury and for property damage and on the ground that, in any event, the obligation to defend is independent of the obligation to pay for bodily injury and property damage.

In the general liability (other than automobile) field, there are three interesting cases on this point.

The first of these involved the famous LaSalle-Madison Hotel fire. The hotel held a policy against liability for damage to or loss of property of guests and invitees. There was a limit of liability of $10,000 for any one catastrophe. A fire occurred. The guests were forced to leave the hotel and were excluded from the hotel for 17 hours. The property of 250 guests was damaged by fire, smoke or water, or was stolen within the 17-hour period. The insurer tendered without prejudice its $10,000 policy limit. In a declaratory judgment proceeding the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, reversing on other grounds the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, held that, after the tender of the policy limit, no further insurance was afforded and the insurer's obligation to defend consequently terminated.[9]

A converse result was reached in an oil well case, where the policy limits for property damage liability under a general liability policy on the driller were $5,000 each accident and $25,000 "aggregate." The well "blew in" and was out of control for 50 hours, damaging surrounding property owned by several different owners. The United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit held that, since the policy provided that the expenses of defense will be paid in addition to policy limits,[10] the insurer must defend each suit against the insured and the insurer had no right to avoid that duty "by paying into court any definite sum of money." [11] It is interesting that this opinion failed to cite any of the three previously mentioned cases or any other authority. It is also interesting that the policy provision cited has nothing to do with the problem. Of course the insurer's expenses are independent in dollars of the policy limit on payment of the insured's obligation. That has no bearing on whether the obligation of the insurer to defend ceases when policy limits are exhausted!

A recent decision in the Supreme Court of New York, Special Term, emphasized the trend toward requiring defense where policy limits are exhausted. There a fishing boat capsized with the loss of 46 lives. Death actions totaling several million dollars were brought against the operators of the development operating the dock and slip from which the boat sailed. In a declaratory judgment proceeding by the insurer issuing a general liability policy to the operators of the development, the Court held that the insurer would be obligated to defend all of the death actions even in the event that, and after, it had exhausted its policy limits of $100,000 each person/$300,000 each accident.[12] We are informed that this case is in the Appellate Division on appeal.

In order to maintain the proper perspective as to this division of authority and as to the effect of the defense clause and of the recent revision, it seems desirable to examine the purposes of the defense clause. Originally, insurance of the types we are considering was fundamentally indemnity the principal object of which was to reimburse the insured for loss arising from liability. In an indemnity policy, it is perfectly feasible for the insured to defend himself against lawsuits and then seek reimbursement from his insurer as regards both loss and defense expenses to which he may have been subjected.

For many years now, however, this type of insurance has been written as insurance against liability rather than indemnity against loss and it has been written in the form of a third party beneficiary contract[13] under which, at some stage, the insurer becomes liable to the claimant. In the absence of statute, the right of action against the insurer is postponed by the Action Against Company Condition of the policy until after judgment is recovered against the insured. In states like Louisiana and Wisconsin, where the insurer is by statute made a proper party defendant in the original action, the full effect of the third party beneficiary contract is realized.

As a necessary corollary to insurance against liability in place of indemnity against loss, the insurance policies, for the protection of the insurer, provided that the insurer should have both the duty and the exclusive right to defend the insured if the litigation involved the allegation of facts which would be within the scope of the policy.

Such defense clauses were subjected to the criticism that the insurer, in providing the defense of suits against the insured was, in effect, engaged in the practice of law. This objection was answered by holdings to the effect that, where the insurer has an ultimate pecuniary interest in the outcome of the litigation because it was or would be eventually liable under its policy in case of judgment adverse to its insured, the insurer was not primarily protecting the insured and therefore possibly practicing law, but was rather primarily protecting its own interest and therefore not practicing law. This rule has been well established for many years.[14] Two of its most recent applications have been in Texas where the contention that the defense clause was a contract to practice law and therefore void was curtly overruled as without merit [15] and the conduct of the defense of the insured under a non-waiver agreement was held not to be a waiver of the insurer's policy defense, as against the contention that the non-waiver agreement was void as a contract by a corporation to practice law, the court indicating that the insurer was seeking to protect its own interests rather than those of the insured pending a judicial determination of its claimed non-liability under the policy.[16] In the latter case, the Texas Supreme Court stated that "Clearly in this case the Company was not an intermeddler. It had some contingent interest to protect." [17]

It must be remembered that under the same circumstances in which the insurer has the obligation to defend it also has the exclusive right to defend [18] and to settle [19] and to choose between defense and settlement.[20] These rights are clearly set forth in the defense clause (Insuring Agreement II) and in the Assistance and Cooperation Condition of the standard policies.

The perspective is, then, (a) that the insurer's promise to defend involves the correlative exclusive right to settle or defend, (b) that, except where the insurer has some pecuniary interest of his own in the defense of the insured, its defense agreement would be a contract to practice law and void, from which it follows, (c) that the promise to defend is not an independent contract for the insurer to practice law but is an exchange of rights and privileges between the insurer and the policyholder which depends on and is neither narrower nor broader than the insurer's obligation to cover claims and judgments.

While it may be easier to understand that the insurer shouldn't and doesn't defend suits against its insured alleging facts completely different from the policy coverage, it may be less apparent but it is nevertheless just as true that the insurer should not and must not defend suits against its insured in which it has no pecuniary interest because it has already exhausted its policy limits. Remember that if the insurer has the duty it then also has the exclusive right and could theoretically defend the lawsuit for the fun of it even though the insured wants to settle. Of course that could never happen, but it does illustrate the falsity of the position that the obligation to defend is an entirely separate and distinct function of an insurance company.

It is true that the cessation of the obligation of the insurer to defend is not without limitations. While no cases on the precise point have been discovered, it is presumed that the insurer may not elect to pay its limit to the insured and thereby cast upon him the full burden of investigation, settlement or defense from the beginning and may not, in the midst of a trial, suddenly exhaust its policy limits by settling with one plaintiff and then leave the insured unprepared and without counsel to try to complete the trial as against another plaintiff. Lumbermen's v. McCarthy [21] cautions against both. Nor is it necessarily contended that an insurer may successfully do what was feared in Anchor Casualty v. McCaleb,[22] pay the money into court before defending any suit, although Denham v. LaSalle Hotel [23] may imply that that is proper. American Casualty v. Howard [24] may not be inconsistent with the position taken here because there there was an outstanding property damage claim as respects which the policy limit had not been exhausted.

Subject to those and perhaps other limitations, the fact remains that, where the question is raised in its pure form, the insurer can and must decline to further defend a suit against the insured, even though the allegations allege facts otherwise within the coverage, where the insurer has no pecuniary interest in the outcome because its policy limits have been exhausted. Granted that the second plaintiff's pleading may allege the same facts as it did before the policy limits were exhausted by payments, facts which were within the policy coverage when the pleading was drawn have now come to be without the policy coverage because of the perfectly proper action of the insurer in exhausting its policy limits by payment. Ergo, defense of the insured against the second plaintiff is no longer required nor permitted by the policy.

The purpose of the 1955 revision in the introductory language to Insuring Agreement II was to reinforce the position taken here, so as to attempt to preclude further decisions that the insurer must defend suits against which it affords no insurance because the facts alleged in the claimant's pleading are outside the scope of the policy, whether horizontally because the policy covers automobile accidents and the facts alleged pertain to a steamboat accident or vertically because, while the facts alleged pertain to an automobile accident, the policy coverage has been exhausted and just is not there any more so far as that accident is concerned.

The Uncompensated Automobile Accident Victim

By ALBERT L. PLUMMER *

INTRODUCTION

THE SUBJECT OF THIS DISCUSSION may rightfully bear several different titles. "The Uncompensated Automobile Accident Victim," "The Financially Irresponsible Motorist," "The Uninsured Motorist." Of the three mentioned, "The Uncompensated Automobile Accident Victim" is the most comprehensive. Under that title we can freely discuss all the known plans that have been submitted as a remedy of the economic problem that has followed many automobile accidents.

The theme song of our times seems to be to insure or indemnify in some manner the losses of mankind. We are a long way from adequately doing that, but the heritage of the American people is to try any project that may be helpful and beneficial. Substantial progress has been made in the past 50 years in the relationship of master and servant. Our workmen's compensation laws have done a fairly good job in an effort to cover the industrial injuries. The insurance industry has made great strides in its efforts to underwrite the property losses of our people due to fire, hurricane, negligence and other causes. The one gigantic unsolved problem is the losses that may arise from the misuse of nuclear energy. Yet, in our deliberation and future planning we should consider the economic problem that remains with us due to the irresponsible or uninsured motorist.

The automobile industry has grown in the past sixty years to the largest of the manufacturing industries. From a few peculiar-looking motor vehicles and operators with their strange paraphernalia in the beginning of the twentieth century they have increased to a total of 61,000,000 registered automobiles and 72,000,000 registered operators in 1955. The progress has been rapid and tremendous since World War II. These developments have made it most difficult for the insurance industry to adequately and timely underwrite the legion of hazards created by the motor vehicle. It has likewise been a most difficult task for leaders of safety programs to minimize the carnage following automobile accidents.

* Mr. Plummer is a member of the Missouri, New York, and Delaware Bars and is associated with Bruce Dodson & Company, Kansas City, Missouri.

The history of automobile underwriting by the insurance industry dates from its first policy in 1898 to a total of over forty million automobiles in 1955; from a total premium of less than $50 to an amount in excess of four billion dollars; from bodily injury and property damage to multiple coverage of physical damage, medical pay, personal effects, life, accident and the uninsured motorist.

Since 1925 there has been a constant effort by the insurance companies and the public to minimize the number of uninsured or financially irresponsible operators upon the public highways. Some of the major plans or laws that have been proposed or adopted to do this are:

The Massachusetts Compulsory Automobile Liability Law
The Motor Vehicle Financial Responsibility Laws
The Saskatchewan Automobile Accident Insurance Act
The New Jersey Unsatisfied Claim and Judgment Fund Law
The Unsatisfied Judgment Insurance Endorsements
The Uninsured Motorists Voluntary Endorsements
The Compulsory Motor Vehicle Indemnification Fund
The Equal Responsibility Amendment
The Automobile Compensation Plan

There is much yet to be done toward adequately compensating the automobile accident victim. A review of some of the things done and planned may better help us to understand the economic problems and what we may expect to develop.

The Compulsory Plans

There are two schools of thought about the adoption of compulsory law to force the financially irresponsible motorist off the public highways. A few compulsory plans have been adopted and many have been proposed and are now being submitted for adoption.

The Massachusetts Compulsory Automobile Liability Law: In 1925 the Legislature of Massachusetts passed an act which became the first compulsory automobile liability law in the United States. The law became effective in 1927. Anyone who has studied the history of that law must admit that it has not been satisfactory to all interests. The rate problem has made it a proverbial "political football." Coverage has been constantly deleted from the compulsory requirements in order to force a lower rate or maintain the existing one. The compulsory law requires every motor operator in Massachusetts, as a condition precedent to the registration and operation of his vehicle, to obtain the minimum statutory compulsory insurance covering the liability for bodily injury to third person on the Massachusetts highways. The insurance must be provided by a company qualified to do business in Massachusetts. The statutory coverage is a maximum of $5,000 for one person and $10,000 for all injuries arising out of any one accident. This compulsory coverage does not extend to the operator of the insured vehicle or to the guests in it. No property damage is required and the statutory coverages do not extend to operators of other states or to accidents off the public highways in the state. The compulsory law provides that in lieu of insurance the registrant may provide a bond or cash deposit (they say that these alternatives have rarely been used). The insurance companies have found themselves in the unsatisfactory position of the public's desire for lower rates and the inevitable upward surge of rising claim costs and accident frequency.

At a public hearing held in the fall of 1955 by Insurance Superintendent Holz of New York and the joint legislative committee on unsatisfied judgment act and compulsory automobile insurance, the testimony of many insurance executives and representatives was given about these many plans. An attorney of one of our largest multiple-line stock companies told of their experiences with this Massachusetts law. He reported that their company had lost over two million dollars between 1945 and 1954, or 5.7% for that ten years in underwriting the statutory bodily injury coverage. Some feel that this experiment will continue in its adverse status, while others feel that the law is a failure, that it should be immediately abandoned and a remedy providing broader coverage at more equitable rates should be adopted.

THE SASKATCHEWAN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT INSURANCE ACT: On March 6, 1946 the Province of Saskatchewan, Canada began to enforce its new Automobile Insurance Act. It was compulsory for every person registering an automobile or securing a driver's license to purchase accident insurance in a government fund. This plan was the first of its kind. It departed entirely from the old established principle of negligence in automobile accidents. Under its provisions, any person injured by or in a licensed vehicle in Saskatchewan with few exceptions, was and is entitled to certain benefits under a schedule set forth in the law. There have been subsequent amendments. The original law partially applied the principle of Workmen's Compensation legislation to automobile accidents, but did not go the whole way and abolish law suits arising out of the automobile accidents. Suits against the motorists are permitted under certain conditions, such as where the injured party can prove damages in excess of his recovery under the provincial fund. The amendments have extended the law to provide bodily injury and property damage liability insurance and comprehensive physical damage coverage which includes collision insurance. The collision and property damage insurance carry a $100 deductible provided the loss occurs within the province. There is no deductible if the loss occurs away from the province. This Saskatchewan law leaves nothing to the private insurance carrier except excess business, and, even in this respect, the Saskatchewan government insurance office is entitled to step in and sell additional coverage to meet the needs of the insured.

It is submitted by many that this plan would not work, especially in the densely-populated areas in the United States. Some have explained that the reason for its present success is that it operates in a large geographical area where less than one million people reside, that there is a maximum of 150,000 automobiles in use, with at least a fourth of them over twenty years old. Further, the climatic conditions prevent 60% of the roads being open for traffic in winter, which is usually a long one. Claim consciousness does not exist in any degree comparable to that of many sections in the United States. This plan has not been extended to other areas of the North American continent.

THE NEW YORK PLAN: In 1954 Governor Dewey of New York proposed a compulsory automobile liability plan for the state. A very vigorous campaign for and against it developed and it was finally defeated. However, there was adopted a revision of the law providing that all minor automobile owners in New York must supply evidence of automobile liability insurance under standard provisions with limits of 10/20/5 in order to register their cars. This same law provided that all minors who operate automobiles in New York must submit similar proof of their financial responsibility.

The latest official action in New York is the proposed "Motor Vehicle Indemnification Fund" by Superintendent Leffert Holz. It is somewhat of a combination of the compulsory laws, the unsatisfied judgment fund, the uninsured motorist coverage and the Saskatchewan accident plan. It would provide, if it becomes a law, that the motorist who cannot show evidence of financial responsibility in 10/20/5 limits must pay a $30 fee. This would be put into a claim fund to pay victims of uninsured motorists. He would get nothing for his $30, and if the claim fund paid out anything on account of him, his car would be impounded, and he would not be allowed to register an automobile or get a driver's license until he fully repaid the loss to the fund. The claimant would have to prove up his claim, just as he would in a common law action, but any controversies with the Superintendent's department about the payment or the extent of it would be arbitrated. The fund would be available to the residents of the state of New York, and to residents of other states, District of Columbia, Canada, and foreign countries "in which laws substantially similar in character are in effect." The limit on claims against the fund would be 10/20/1 with a $200 deductible on property damage. The fund would be subject to claims arising out of the operation of stolen vehicles, uninsured out-of-state cars and the "hit-and-run" motorist. They estimate that there are 700,000 uninsured motor vehicles in New York state which would mean a fund of $21,000,000 on or after 1957 if it becomes a law.

This bill was killed in the state senate in spite of the efforts of Governor Harriman and others to get it passed. Instead the Legislature enacted a Compulsory Law in March 1946 called the Motor Vehicle Financial Security Act which is briefly explained in another part of this paper.

COMMON CARRIERS: It is common knowledge to most of us that anyone who owns and operates an automobile as a common carrier must qualify under the state and federal laws which mandatorily provide proof of financial responsibility with a required bodily injury and property damage coverage and the minimum required statutory limits depending upon the capacity and purposes of use of the vehicle.

PRESENT STATUS: Compulsory automobile insurance bills are now pending in the legislatures of Arizona, Georgia and other states. It is definitely a current trend. New York State has just passed such a statute. A bill pending in the Georgia legislature was submitted by a state senator who had been involved in an auto accident with an uninsured and irresponsible motorist. He vigorously proposes its adoption.

The principle of compulsory insurance is contrary to the American way of life even though it has been effectively applied in our workmen's compensation laws, and common carrier acts.

AUTOMOBILE LIABILITY SECURITY LAWS

FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY LAWS: Connecticut was the first state to enact a "Financial Responsibility Law." It was effective January 1, 1926. Vermont and Rhode Island followed with the enactment of a similar law on June 1, 1927. Thereafter, all of the other states did likewise. Most of these laws were very liberal when first enacted, but from time to time amendments were made converting them from a so-called one "bite" or accident type to that of the security type. The financial responsibility laws are not uniform in their requirements. The minimum requirements on property damage losses for reporting purposes is from $35 in Vermont to $200 in the state of Washington. The average minimum requirements in most of the states on property damage claims only is $50 or $100 before a report is required or the law applies. The minimum liability requirements for bodily injury and property damage when security is required is usually 5/10/1 with some states requiring 5/10/2, 10/20/1, 10/20/2 and 10/20/5. Connecticut now has the highest requirement which is 20/20/1.

CALIFORNIA: The only one that has attempted some form of impoundment penalty is California. An amendment to their financial law effective July 1, 1956 provides for suspension of reregistration and storage of the vehicle involved in the accident until security is deposited or all claims paid.

The earlier laws required the claims be reduced to judgment before any form of security was required. In 1937 New Hampshire amended its law to require the minimum security after the accident so that at this time forty-six of the states, the District of Columbia and Hawaii have eliminated the judgment requirement and substantially followed the New Hampshire law.

The main objective of these financial responsibility or liability laws has been to encourage the owners and operators of motor vehicles to adequately insure their hazards or provide the minimum required financial security for the payment of legally responsible claims following an accident. It has been estimated by those who may know that these laws have been the means of encouraging at least 50% of the motorists to adequately insure or otherwise provide financial security.

NEW YORK: In New York state prior to the enactment of the law on September 1, 1929 there were about 30% of the vehicles insured. Today that figure stands at about 90%. Of course the increase became substantial after the security type of amendment was added in 1942. The amendment on July 1, 1955 has encouraged and forced more to insure, giving us the present percentage.

In March 1956 the Motor Vehicle Financial Security Act was enacted and signed by Governor Harriman in April 1956. Parts of that compulsory automobile financial responsibility law will become effective on various dates, that is, October 1, 1956, January 1, 1957 and February 1, 1957. In substance it provided that some form of financial responsibility must be provided for when application for the auto license is made. The law identifies the forms of proof. They are—a motor vehicle liability policy with minimum limits of 10/20/5, a surety company bond or similar security, a deposit of cash or securities in the amount of $15,000, or qualify as a self insurer as otherwise provided in the act. The commission to comply with these mandatory requirements subjects the registered owner and/or the operator of the motor vehicle to certain penalties. That penalty may be a fine of not less than $100 or more than $1,000, or imprisonment for not more than one year or both. A study of the law will indicate that it is broader in scope than the Massachusetts law but similar in principle in that both are compulsory. In signing this bill to make it law, Governor Harriman also promised that he will continue his efforts for legislation that will afford financial protection to persons injured or killed by automobiles not under the law such as hit-and-run drivers, out-of-state drivers or operators of stolen autos. Further, he expressed a regret that the legislature had not passed the "Compulsory Indemnifying" plan proposed by Superintendent Holz. That Act would include provisions for coverage to the injured auto accident victim due to the action of the uninsured or hit-and-run motorist.

"THE EQUAL RESPONSIBILITY AMENDMENT": Some representatives of the insurance industry have suggested "The Equal Responsibility Amendment" to force the others to insure. That recommendation if adopted, may mean an amendment to the Financial Responsibility Laws whereby each driver would be required to carry a certificate showing that he is able to pay—either through private resources, through a posted bond or through adequate insurance coverage for accidents he might cause. Motorists who would drive without first establishing financial responsibility would be subject to a fine, a jail sentence or both. (New York has now adopted this idea.)

It is further estimated that there are approximately 15% of the operators of motor vehicles in the United States that have not provided any form of financial security for motor vehicle accidents in spite of the penalties of the financial responsibility laws with their security type provisions. Therefore, there is a very active movement on at this time to try other methods to enforce full security beginning with the first accident. The two main ones being the previously mentioned Equal Responsibility Amendment and the Impoundment Law.

THE UNSATISFIED JUDGMENT FUND plans have been another approach to the problem of the uncompensated automobile accident victim, and were enacted to supplement the Financial Responsibility Law. They are wholly or partially government managed funds that provide coverage for those who sustain automobile accident losses even after the claims are reduced to judgment. This type of loss originated in Manitoba, January 1, 1946 and has since been adopted in North Dakota on July 1, 1947, New Jersey on April 1, 1955 and also by the Provinces of Alberta, British Columbia, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Ontario and Prince Edward Island of Canada. These laws are not uniform and are yet in an experimental stage.

NEW JERSEY: The New Jersey law, as an example, is called the "Unsatisfied Claim and Judgment Fund Law." The fund is created by the insured motorist paying $1.00 at the time he registers his automobile and the uninsured motorist paying $3.00. The insurance companies doing business in New Jersey pay ½ of 1% of their bodily injury and property damage premiums. The fund is managed by designated government agencies and representatives of the insurance companies. The fund is used to reimburse persons who have secured judgments in the state for bodily injury or death and property damage from automobile accidents that are returned unsatisfied except for the following persons:

A person driving or riding in an uninsured motor vehicle owned by him, his spouse, parent or child.

The spouse, parent or child of an uninsured motorist.

A guest occupant cannot use the Fund to recover against his host.

A person driving a motor vehicle in violation of an order of suspension or revocation.

A person covered with respect to such injury or death by any workmen's compensation law.

There is a $200 deductible on all claims. There is also a limit of $1,000 for property damage, a limit of $5,000 for death or injury of one person and a maximum of $10,000 for injuries or death arising out of one accident. The other collecting requirements are exacting and somewhat cumbersome. Truly, this particular unsatisfied judgment fund plan is being watched with much interest by all of those interested in this economic problem.

NORTH DAKOTA: The Financial Responsibility Law of North Dakota together with its Unsatisfied Judgment Fund requires security of 5/10/1 with $100 property damage deductible plus the payment of $1.00 by each registered motorist for the purpose of creating a fund. If financial security is not satisfactorily proven within sixty days the license is subject to immediate revocation. If a judgment is rendered following the accident and is returned unsatisfied, the resident accident victim may obtain payments to the limits of 5/10 if the uncollectible judgment exceeds $300. The judgment is then assigned to the State Treasurer, and the license and registration continues to be suspended until the Fund has been fully repaid. The New Jersey and the North Dakota Funds are similar in principle but different in detail provision; neither Funds include non-residents—Benson v. Schneider—68 N.W. 2d 665. 1955.

The Unsatisfied Judgment Funds are experimental and their duration will depend upon better plans with the uninsured paying the full costs. Already a Massachusetts Legislature Committee has considered the Unsatisfied Judgment Funds as impractical and probably unconstitutional.

THE INSURANCE COVERAGES

The first insurance coverage provided for the automobile motorist was for bodily injury and property damage in 1898. If we were to study that policy today we would find it very restricted and the limits very low with the insurance companies guessing at an adequate premium rate. Following that event fifty-eight years ago, there have been some very substantial developments in the insurance coverages both in the scope and limits. However, the insurance industry has acted in most instances with proper foresight and prudence so that security and stability would always be present. So, as "time marches on" we have observed the broadening of the bodily injury and property damage coverages with the desired limits, the adding of the physical damage coverages now known as the comprehensive, collision and personal effects. In 1936 the insurance companies prepared the standard form automobile policy in order to combine the many coverages into one contract, to make the provisions uniform and to charge a more equitable rate. That trend continued by adding to the standard form policy such endorsements as—drive other car, additional interest clause, broad form definition of automobile, medical payments, accident and life insurance benefits and now, lastly, the Unsatisfied Judgment and Uninsured Motorist Endorsements.

U. J. C. ENDORSEMENT: In January of 1954 the Unsatisfied Endorsement was added to the standard form automobile policy by several companies. Some chap in California claimed the honor of having the exclusive copyright of that form of coverage. But in spite of his notices of his exclusive interest, more than a dozen insurers have issued that form of coverage. Without taking the limited time and space to review this scope of coverage, I might add that it sold for $5.00 to $7.50. It would only pay after it was determined that the judgment was uncollectible. Some of the limited endorsements provided that judgments by default were not covered. The limits were usually 5/10 for bodily injury. Most of them did not provide for property damage. That form of coverage was very restricted and only served the imperative needs of the motorist that may desire it. It was another step in the right direction to give more adequate insurance coverage and to particularly relieve the pressure caused by the economic problem of the uninsured motorist.

UNINSURED MOTORIST COVERAGE. After the U. J. C. was introduced there was a rapid movement on to stop the enactment of compulsory automobile financial responsibility bills. A concentrated effort was made in 1954 in New York, and the bill was defeated. But, as a remedy of the needs to more adequately compensate the auto accident victim, the insurance industry proposed the "Uninsured Motorists Endorsement" which is sometimes called the "Innocent Victim" coverage. The stock and mutual companies agreed that some form of insurance coverage should be immediately provided for the public but they disagreed as to the scope and form of the coverage. So, two endorsement forms have been prepared. Most stock and some mutual companies have prepared a limited form which covers the damages that the insureds are "legally entitled" to. Some of the mutual companies have adopted the broad form providing that the negligence of the uninsured is presumed. The endorsement specifically uses the following language: "Provided, for the purposes of this endorsement the accident causing such injury shall be deemed to have resulted from the negligence of such uninsured owner or operator without the negligence of the insured in any way contributing thereto." It further covered the named insured, his spouse, and relatives of either while residents of the same household. In addition it covers anybody in, upon, entering or alighting from the automobile, if done with permission of the insured. To the insured and members of his household it will cover the pedestrian accidents that are caused by the uninsured vehicle. The two forms of endorsements are practically the same except one presumes negligence and the other does not. The limited form does provide that any controversies between the parties shall be decided in accordance with rules of the American Arbitration Association. The broad form states that the controversies shall be settled by an appraisal, specifically provided in the endorsement. The coverage is in the nature of a bond in that the insurance companies are entitled to assignment of the claim (by way of a trust agreement) and may take such steps as it deems advisable to recover from the other party, at its expense, but with the insured agreeing to co-operate as directed. The definition of the insured automobile is sufficiently broad to include any automobile for which liability insurance would be provided under the "drive other car" section of the policy. It specifically excludes any accident caused by an automobile owned by the insured or any resident of his household and any publicly-owned automobile. These endorsements were first added to existing policies in the state of New York in October, 1955, without charge. Upon renewal if the insured desired the coverage he would pay $2.50 for the limited form or $4.00 for the broad form. The limits were 10/20 and covered only bodily injury and death claims. A study of the endorsements will inform those interested of the details about the coverage.

The insurance industry is to be complimented for the efforts they have made to help the American citizen to cope with this uncompensated automobile accident victim problem. The uninsured motorist endorsement is a commendable result of the industry's efforts to do the job without delegating it to the government. Our hope is that this uninsured motorist coverage will be quickly extended to all parts of our country.

The Compensation Plan

All of the so-called compensation plans for the handling of automobile accident claims are based on liability without fault. This plan was considered in New York as far back as 1924 and 1925. Judge Robert S. Marx made many speeches and did considerable writing on the general subject: "The Curse of the Personal Injury Suits and a Remedy" (10 A.B.A.J.—1924). In fact, he helped draft a bill known as the Straus-Cuvilier Bill that would make this plan the law of New York, but it was always defeated when submitted. Later in 1932 Columbia University submitted a report on the subject which was known as the "Columbia Plan." It was also referred to as the "Ballantine Report," named after the Chairman of the Committee that made the study and submitted the report. It recommended the adoption of the plan. But, it was vigorously fought and failed to become a law. In the meantime Mr. Ray Brown and others made an exhaustive study of it for the State of Wisconsin and in concluding his report said, among other things: "The writer is of the opinion that on the whole, it would be undesirable at the present time to apply the compensation plan to automobile accidents." Even though Mr. Ballantine recommended the adoption of that plan at the time of his report, he later concluded that it may not be practical or workable. Nevertheless, the converts of this social idea, principally in the "Halls of Ivy," have not relinquished their interest in the issue.

THE SASKATCHEWAN PLAN. Finally the Province of Saskatchewan, Canada in 1946 adopted such a plan and made it their law under the title: "The Automobile Accident Insurance Act." The material parts of the plan have already been explained in another part of this discussion. This comprehensive plan in Saskatchewan did not abrogate the existing negligence laws for the prosecution of liability claims but supplemented them. It is both a compensation and compulsory automobile bodily injury and property damage law. Those who administer that law have annually reported its very satisfactory operation. Some of the critics explain the favorable report by saying that it is due to its sparsely-populated area, a substantial number of old motor vehicles, retarded winter traffic and lack of claim consciousness. Only time will tell if the plan will spread to other areas. So far the efforts to adopt it in principle by legislation in the United States have failed. The broad form Uninsured Motorist Endorsement issued by the mutual insurance companies in New York state in 1955 is the nearest we have to a voluntary adoption of the plan by the insurance industry.

CONCLUSION

The foregoing reports are personal observations and conclusions. They may not be 100% accurate but they do bear my honest interpretations. It is obvious from this information that it is well nigh impossible to protect every person injured in an automobile accident. The best forms of insurance coverages submitted by any insurance company to date bear limited insurance clauses, many exceptions, plus numerous conditions. The best plan proposed or adopted for the compensation of the automobile accident victim has its limitations in both scope and coverage. The only thing we can reasonably hope for on this project is to minimize the economic loss by better indemnifying plans at less cost. The ingenuity of human resourcefulness has not yet come up with the "Open Sesame" to the problem.

It is also well to remember that in 1955, 92,000 people were killed and 9,200,000 were injured by accident in the United States. Of this group the automobile killed 38,300 and injured 1,350,000. The work accidents in 1955 caused the death of 14,200 and they injured 1,900,000. It has also been reported that the home accidents in 1955 took the lives of 27,000 and the injured numbered 4,050,000. For some unknown reason we are not now concentrating upon the greatest source of our accident victims. That is—in our homes.

Federation of Insurance Counsel

The Federation of Insurance Counsel was organized in 1936 for the purpose of bringing together insurance attorneys and company representatives in order to assist in establishing a standard of efficiency and competency in rendering legal service to insurance companies, and to disseminate information on insurance legal topics to its membership.

The first annual convention was held in 1937, and meetings have been held annually thereafter, except during the years of World War II, 1942 through 1945. The Annual Proceedings were published in separate volumes until 1950, at which time the Federation of Insurance Counsel Quarterly was established and the Insurance Law Journal of Commerce Clearing House, Inc., Chicago, Illinois, began publishing the addresses delivered at the annual conventions.

Inquiries concerning the Federation or the Quarterly should be directed to the President or to the Editor. Membership applications are processed through the Vice-President in the area of the applicant, upon recommendation of another member. Dues are $12.00 annually, or $6.00 after July 1, which includes subscription to the Quarterly. An application fee of $10.00 must accompany all membership applications.
